Using Time Travel for Intelligence Gathering & Predicting Future Presidents

Andrew D. Basiago, J.D., reveals more of his time travel experiences associated with Project Pegasus that he was formally a part of from 1969 to 1972. In this interview he goes into detail of what he encountered when he was transported to the year 2045. He describes how he underwent age-progression as one of the experiments that would prepare him for the rigors of time travel. Andy discusses how future Presidents and public officials would be pre-identified using the time travel technology. These included presidents George W. Bush, Bill Clinton, and Barack Obama and future Secretary of Defense, Donald Rumsfeld. Intelligence gathering of future events such as the September 11, 2001 attacks was an important aspect of Project Pegasus. In this interview Andy discusses the critical role Rumsfeld played in Project Pegasus, and how he behaved ethically in his interactions with Andy and other child participants. Rumsfeld's role in subsequent events such as the Jackie Gleason Homestead AFB incident with President Nixon is discussed, as well as his role in revealing the Pentagon's black budget one day prior to the September 11 attacks, and his support for the creation of a U.S. Space Corps that was stymied by the Pentagon bureaucracy. This interview is the second in an ongoing series with Andrew Basiago. For his first Exopolitics Today interview with Dr. Michael Salla released on July 5, visit: Project Pegasus & Time Travel: Interview w...

DR. SALLA: In 1973 there's this famous incident involving Gleason being taken to Homestead Air Force Base by Richard Nixon, that the president showed him the crashed UFOs and such and other devices. And of course Gleason went on to talk about that years later. But when Nixon and Gleason showed up at Homestead Air Force Base to be admitted, they were met by a senior Air Force official officer. This is according to Clark McClelland, who was a former spacecraft operator and he has disclosed a lot about the history of NASA, the Germans and so forth.

But he said that Gleason and Nixon were met at Homestead Air Force Base by none other than Donald Rumsfeld. That Donald Rumsfeld was the intermediary. He was the guy that would give Nixon and Gleason access to the crashed UFO material. So if Rumsfeld was a bad guy, I mean he would never have done that. But he was giving Nixon and Gleason access to stuff that others within the control system probably wouldn't have wanted to happen because Gleason was famous at the time.

ANDREW: I concur and also if I might add that it was Rumsfeld who came forward publicly the day before 9-11 and announced that something like $3.5 trillion was missing from the Pentagon.

DR. SALLA: Well I want to welcome Andy Basiago again to Exopolitics Today. Andy has been with us once before and introduced us to the Project Pegasus that he went through as a child in the 1960s. And so there's a lot of issues to still touch on and there's more to Andy's story. So I want to welcome you to the show Andy.

ANDREW: Good to be back with you Michael. You know it occurred to me when we last spoke that in fact the previous time we had appeared together was at the MUFON Symposium which I believe was in July of 2017 and from left to right it was myself, yourself and then the great William Tompkins, the inestimable Corey Goode and then the brilliant Richard Dolan on the right. That was a great panel that we had.

DR. SALLA: That was a really fascinating panel and I think that it is available maybe I'll have to dig for the URL for that so that people want to find that and listen to that. Very interesting and kind of like highlighted the different methodologies that people are debating over in the UFO community over sources and vetting and credibility and all of that. So very interesting because all five people on that panel just came from very different positions on that.

But one of the things that we did touch on in the last interview was that during one of your time travel experiments you were taken to the year 2045 and I think you just mentioned it, but you actually didn't describe what you saw there and I think you said something about being indoors, but people wanted to know well what else did you experience into that trip into the future for time travel intelligence gathering.

ANDREW: Well what they did is at the end of the school year in 1972 which was the end of my fifth grade year, they told all of the children of Pegasus I believe it was Jack Pruitt that we were all going to be sent out of the program, separated from the program, that they would never talk to us again and if they were ever asked whether we would were in the program or the program existed they would state that they had never heard of us and that the program never existed, but then they called back some of us for that summer.

Now the whole thrust of that summer were Stargate voyages to the year 2045 which they had selected because it was a hundred years after the advent of atomic weapons, 1945.

In other words, they had created sort of a time travel based staging base a hundred years from the end of World War II and that particular device was on the Olympic sized basketball court at the Cerritos Cultural Center. Now behind that to the right there was a symphony orchestra stage where they had placed the chronovisor that they used to send me in the summer of 1971 eight times to Ford's theater to see who shot President Lincoln and it always changed a little bit, but by summer 1972 they had shut that down.

Now the Stargate was essentially this huge black anvil shaped device going all the way up to the ceiling of this Olympic basketball sized court and we would run up a ramp and go through essentially a large teleporter not with the elliptical booms like the one back at Curtis Wright or New Jersey or the one at the Sandia National Labs northeast of Albuquerque, New Mexico, but basically just this big black anvil and we had been trained to sort of conserve our oxygen by sort of sipping it off the top of our lungs and I think I've had a minor respiratory problem at least with hyperventilation ever since, but as I think I mentioned on last month's show with you that because I had played alto saxophone for three years by 1972 that really wasn't that much of a challenge to me to be able to just sort of sip the air because it took 30 seconds to after going through the Stargate to get from 1972 to the year 2045.

Now when we got there we were essentially on a plaza and I could see different buildings. I could see gentlemen driving those Segway or iBOT devices that Dean Kamen invented driving paperwork and mail and stuff between buildings, but there seemed to be some reduction in population at least in that location. It was somewhere I think in the American Southwest. It was some somewhat more temperate than the towns in that area of our country were that I knew in 1972 and it was not as hot it was not as dry as Albuquerque or Santa Fe or Phoenix, Arizona and so forth all towns that I had visited and I would always be popped back into view after jumping through this Stargate and it was called a Stargate.

I think the use of the term Stargate in the remote viewing program might have been disinformation. I've talked about what I call the high-side disinformation of just talking about remote viewing which is something that we were doing for the office of Naval Intelligence as early as fall of 1969, but never discussing the chronovisors that were also part of that program.

So we were using a Stargate that's what it was called that's what we were trained on. In fact, we had to go through this catapult just to get used to being propelled through time space so quickly and suddenly and so violently if you will.

Now we popped into view somewhere between right in front of the building to about a mile from it we'd have to walk there. There was a sort of a plaza that we would walk along. Now when we got there it was a beautiful tungsten building with emerald colored glass and we'd go towards the door and it would open automatically and inside this office which presumably was some sort of CIA or other Intel agency building in the future.

They didn't tell us where or what year it was. We only found out it was 2045 when some of their technicians were sent back to our time to fix the device and they said to us you kids don't know what year we're from we're from 2045 you aren't told that.

We say well thank you very much and they weren't supposed to tell us. So anyway we would go in there and I would meet with this middle-aged employee and he would explain to us how he was going to be giving us these microfilm summaries of events falling between 1972 and 2045.

Now we were never shown those we were just shown the microfilm itself by Jack Pruitt back in 1972 he took it out of the capsule and it was like 300 feet of film all over the floor, but it was essentially all encrypted. It was basically different histograms bar graphs and numbers and images. So I never found out what we were faring back from the future to the present, but it was essentially made clear to us that we were giving the Department of Defense a history of the future to prevent nuclear war and achieve other important goals of our country.

DR. SALLA: Were you told anything? Were you given any details about that about that future what happened in around 2045?
ANDREW: No except because I was the son of a project principal and I was involved in many of the important project activities that were going on I would hear them talking about different things that did fall between 1972 and the future. I heard about 9-11 and exactly what was going to happen on 9-11. I heard about the advent of the internet. I heard about the advent of HIV AIDS as a pandemic that would kill people as a result of sexual activity.
I heard about the bushes that George H. W. Bush and George W. Bush being president Bill Clinton and Barack Obama being among our future presidents. I heard of the sort of commonality of the cell phone revolution that would occur because my dad said we saw you walking around with these little walkie talkies, so mobile phones are going to be a big deal.
so I pretty much learned about some of the information that they were bringing back from the future, but we were not being briefed we were just errands who were going there and then coming back and I had to be age progressed from around age 10 to midlife age 45 or 50 and they told me it was something to do with genetics that even though it was healthier for children to be sent to the future with less chances of medical side effects they still were going to age progress that actually cast me sort of holographically about a mile into the streetscape there in Albuquerque and I had to find my way back to Sandia.
And when I did I walked into a meeting my dad snapped his fingers and said that's my son and what was he looking at. He was looking at his youngest son out of three and five children who looked a lot like him at midlife. As Courtney Hunt of both Project Pegasus and project Mars when said to me, yes it was pretty much a joke on the project that you were a clone of your dad you look so much alike.
So my dad basically saw a slightly younger, he was like 47 48 in 1970 72 my she was what 49 and I came through the door at Sandia national labs and it's sort of a 45 year old version of him, but it's this 10 year old who's been age progressed. I then had to live for about three and half weeks in a medical lab at Sandia with extremely high walls so that nobody would see that I had been age progressed, not regressed, not 20 years and back, but just 20 years.

DR. SALLA: Can you explain a little bit about how that age progression process works? I mean what kind of technology was used and I mean is it just trend yes exactly what technology is used and what consciousness I mean are we talking about a 10-year-old in the body of a 45-year-old or is something just something happening?
ANDREW: Yes they never explained these esoteric activities to me, but they basically put me in a what looked like a phone booth and they said okay Andy when we turn this on you're going to be about 45 50 years physically, but we know you're going to be cast out of Sandia here so just ask questions from people or whoever you need police officers on the street or whoever and say how do I get to the Sandia national labs which I did.
So I basically was somehow not just age progressed, but cast away from Sandia and how that came together I don't know, but it could have been that point of the fact by the future it is going to be a dislocation of locations that you time travel from. So they did that and they my dad met with me and his colleagues and they took me to this medical lab so they didn't tell me how it worked, but I was in a meeting with my dad and about three or four his colleagues, not really generally that I knew, but I could tell him on the project and Sandia was a place of course.
I knew because we had been teleporting back in New Jersey from a teleport on the first, really the only floor. It was a ground floor complex over on the right side of the second building and they were long linear buildings and I was placed in this medical lab and I was given three books, The Grapes of Wrath by John Steinbeck, Moby Dick by Herman Melville and The Adventures of Huckleberry's by Mark Twain and I read all three of those.
My dad had explained to me don't worry son you said to live in this room the next three and a half weeks and a nice lady will be coming by to give you breakfast lunch and dinner you're going to be fed like a king, so don't worry and I basically had a bed, a sink and a commode and that was it.

And that's where I stayed and there was a mirror and I saw myself as a 45 or 50-year-old with all of the physical attributes of a grown man and I of course had not yet gone through adolescence. I was only 10 in summer 1972, not yet even 11 and I could see it in the mirror that I was like my dad with all the attributes of a grown man and then it just wore off.
I was never aged regressed, but as a result of that experience when I heard the account of Michael C. Ralph in 1999 I would defer to your memories, but I think that was the first account of 20 years and back, the idea of age, of somebody spending 20 years in the Secret Space program and then being regressed biologically 20 years and then sent back in time 20 years and then discharged from the program. That wasn't what happened to me, but I was age progressed and I saw the effect wearing off for three weeks and so that must have been possible 25 years later.
DR. SALLA: So the actual process of age progression I mean you what you went into this telephone box size apparatus and you would just project somewhere else in that Sandia National Laboratory area there and while you were kind of projected to another location, you were also age progressed so it was just like almost instantaneous. Is that what happened?
ANDREW: Well say when my biological age was changed from around 10 and a half, true they said I would be around 45 or 50 years of age. I did not time travel because when I walked back from the streetscape of Albuquerque, New Mexico to the Sandia National Labs it was still summer 1972.
So this was just a biological treatment I was getting before they then would involve me in the Stargate probes to 2045 and they made that quite clear that we're just sort of capacitating you biologically so that when you get to 2045 you will have experienced getting to the age you're going to be before or maybe after the year 2000, what more around what, in 2021 I was 60, so 2011 I was 50, so around to the age I would be, so in 2011 before going to 2045.
So there was something they knew biologically about the risk to us of going 75 years from 1972 to 2045 and it was just sort of a progression, but then then letting the effect wear off and then they sent me physically to 2045.

DR. SALLA: Well I know that with the age regression technique that Michael Ralph, Corey Goode and Randy Kramer described they all said pretty much the same thing that they after the completion of their 20 year service that they were put into some stasis chamber fed a whole cocktail of drugs and they were there for two weeks or something and that's how they were age regressed, but in your case the your age progressed about 30 years or 45 years in age your age progressed through this device and then it just wears off. There's nothing else needed.
ANDREW: Exactly, and so what I heard about Michael's times in 1999 saying he had been gotten the 20 years and back after serving him from 1996 I thought wow that was 24 years after the age progressed me. It certainly seems to me like 20 years and back or basically service for 20 years followed by age regression of 20 years and time traveling back 20 years would have been possible because look they had 70 to 75 years in the future after age progressing me and letting it wear off and then jumping back from 2045 to 1972.
So I thought to myself and others remember mentioning to E Francis Lorgan or I think had informed me about Michael C. Ralph's claims that that would certainly seem to be within the developmental timeline of what I was exposed to in the early 70s because there was a good quarter century to allow with Michael C. Ralph and then later others were reporting.
DR. SALLA: And was that age progression also intended so that when you go into the future 2045 that people there would take you seriously rather than being a 10-year-old?
ANDREW: After they age progressed me to mid-life they let it wear off so I was 10 and a half again. So when I went to 2045 I was my childhood self and in fact two ladies an African American lady and that Caucasian lady walked diagonally across my path and I was just walking through the lobby of the building and one said “Oh that one, that's Andy, that one must be Andy.”
So they knew from my future prominence I guess with my book about Pegasus and other public activities that I was destined to live, that this was the child version.
It would be like saying oh there's the 10-year-old Willie Mays hey there's the say hey kid how did at age 10. I was a child when it when this effect wore off and then we started jumping 2045.

DR. SALLA: I see and in 2045 was there any kind of noticeable differences in terms of technology or the people from 1972?
ANDREW: The technology, what there was, there was a portion of differences like I noticed that there were sort of flat screens that were on a post to the desks. One thing that really struck me and I've shared with others is that this office was crammed with house plants, more than you would ever see in a modern office building it was almost as if they were making up for some loss of oxygen in our atmosphere like cramming the office with house plants.
Now they gave us these canisters that we had essentially inserted as a suppository before jumping back to the present in 1972 and that would be the grounds around the logo overlook site which is three miles up elevation right on the western side of the continental divide sign on highway 160 as you go north at the Pagosa Springs Colorado towards Colorado Springs you hit the great divide, the continental divide and there's a little sign the left that says Lobo Overlook Three Miles and it goes because up elevation for three miles and then you come out and there's a hundred massive antennae.
It's an area that time travel experiencers have come to call “Montauk southwest” it was the one featured in the movie Packing for Mars by Frank Jacob and Tonia Madenford, that I'm featured in. And so that's where they were taking us back from 2045.
We then I had to go into the restroom, remove the canister which had been deposited as a suppository pull on this string, take the canister and then bury it somewhere on the grounds of that complex and I don't know how they would find this little canister unless by some metal detector or something they would use because we were instructed to just bury them on site and I think that what they explained that was to so they would sort of cut off those in the future providing the information and those who were going to be collecting it, But it was explained to us that that was what was called in the intelligence community a “dead drop.”
So we were burying those canisters in the site there at the Lobo Overlook site. In fact, I think if somebody went up there today with a metal detector or just arbitrarily started digging holes they might find one of those canisters, but if they did it would just be microfilm of 1970s vintage with a bunch of encrypted information so it really wouldn't prove anything, but about my claims.

It wouldn't reveal what they knew about the future, but as I said as a result of my father being a principal on the project and his colleagues always helping him for what he knew or he always having conversations with John Alexander McCone the former director of central intelligence and others Donald Rumsfeld who was the defense attaché of the project and others, I learned a lot about what the future held, but when you have childhood memories like this and something like 9-11 happens 30 years later, it's hard to go oh yes that's what they told me about 30 years ago it's just kind of lost and in the time stream if you will.
DR. SALLA: You mentioned Donald Rumsfeld and I know he was a critical figure in the Project Pegasus and certainly in terms of someone that you had extensive dealings with so let's talk about him. Now what we know about him is that he was a firstly a congressman and actually I think even during the in the 1950s I think he was I within the Navy Reserve, so I think he reached a senior rank I think he reached a rank of captain in the Navy Reserve as I recall.
Then of course he served in the U.S. Congress, but around 1969 which is around the time you began Project Pegasus officially he is now working in the Nixon White House in a number of positions, but ends up being a counselor to President Nixon, so this this was the perfect cover for him being involved in these covert projects. So tell us about Rumsfeld and his involvement with Project Pegasus.
ANDREW: Yes, once he sort of had served as a pilot for the Navy during the Korean conflict and I remember in fact him talking about lining up enemy combatants down below and then going by with this plane bam, bam, bam, bam shooting foreign combatants. I have a clear image of him years before Jack Collins did it during the academy awards one year doing one handed push-ups was down at I believe a hotel that we were at a reception at downtown Albuquerque.
I clearly remember an incident in which my father and I went into a bar. Now my dad did not let me drink. He would always have me have a Coca-Cola or a Nihi and we went into a bar in Albuquerque and he said when they came “Can I order you a drink?” and he said “No Ray” in that dry way of talking like Henry Fonda said “No Ray, I've got my martini as long as I've got my martini I’m fine.

My father and I sat down at the bar across from him said well on this program we need to drink down now again don't we Rummy and he said “I know Ray I sometimes I wake up and I ask I say to myself are we really sending little children in time it's hard to even believe and I think, my God, we are.”
Another time I remember being in that meeting on that farm my dad said he, put on a couple pauses, a little low, but he said Rummy we've determined in the program that you make Defense Secretary and Don Rumsfeld said “I know Ray I saw that in one of the reports, but that's one event in the future that I’ll only believe if it happens.”
Another time I remember I called him Rummy and he said “No Andy, call me Don. I don't like the kids in the program calling me Rummy, getting in trouble with alcohol.”
I remember another time we went into another eatery or bar and he said so Rummy what are we going to be doing and he said well we're planning to send the kids on for the Naval Academy and use that as a pretext for involving them in future project activities.
Another time I remember they were saying so Rummy are you using the program to fool around and he said “Nope gentleman.” and they said “Why not and they have the opportunity to teleport here do what you want in your downtime that teleport back for the day you left so why aren't you using it to have an extramarital affair while you're here even to deal with the years of separation from your wife and your normal life. While you're here nobody's really complaining about that type of activity. Essentially these are adults in private places taking mistresses while they were there in quantum displacement New Mexico.
And he said “Nope gentleman” and he said “Why not, I love my wife” and so one of the points I've been making about actual service in these classified defense projects that's distinguished from sort of the post-Viet Nam syndrome of us condemning our alphabet agencies and the defense department and the people like my father and Donald Rumsfeld who were principals in those projects is the view that you get of them as human beings is often quite different than the way they're vilified.

For example, there was actually a tribunal that tried Bush, Cheney, and Rumsfeld for war crimes. Let me tell you Michael the Donald Rumsfeld that I met as a child was a very good person. He was very moral. As I said he even told me not to call him Rummy because it might be viewed as a reference to alcoholism. He defended his marital vows and his love for his wife. That's very beautiful, very ethical.
DR. SALLA: I just want to kind of like focus on that a little bit because I know people have been very skeptical and said, well Rumsfeld? How come Andy said Rumsfeld was a honorable person? I mean wasn't he scum? Wasn't he the guy that got us into Iraq?
I just wanted to kind of like focus on that aspect because he has been clearly vilified, but I know he's actually played some very important roles in disclosure. For example in 1973 there's this famous incident involving Jackie Gleason being taken to Homestead air force base by Richard Nixon, that the president showed him the crashed UFOs and such and other devices and of course Gleason went on to talk about that years later, but when Nixon and Gleason showed up at Homestead air force base to be given access, to be admitted they were met by a senior a senior air force official officer this is according to Clark McClelland who was a former spacecraft operator and he has disclosed a lot about the history of NASA the Germans and so forth, but he said that Gleason and Nixon were met at Homestead air force base by none other than Donald Rumsfeld, that Donald Rumsfeld was the intermediary. He was the guy that would give Nixon and Gleason access to the crashed UFO material, so if Rumsfeld was a bad guy I mean he would never have done that, but he was given Nixon and Gleason access to stuff that others within the control system probably wouldn't have wanted to happen because Gleason was famous at the time.
ANDREW: I concur and also if I might add that it was Rumsfeld who came forward publicly the day before 9-11 and announced that something like 3.5 trillion dollars was missing from the pentagon why would a villain have done that if he was part of the Deep State rather than simply an ethical person serving in important positions like the only I mean the American to serve the most number of days as Secretary of Defense under Presidents Gerald Ford and George W. Bush.

Why would he have done that he would have concealed it on behalf of the Deep State. So all I'm saying is as a kid from Morris Plains New Jersey where I was friends with Jimmy the mailman and I was almost I was naturally and even trained in reading adults and animals and whoever I might encounter time traveling
I got a good vibe from Don Rumsfeld. He was a trustworthy moral person. Now there was a meeting with him that was critical I think the most important thing that I did with Rumsfeld is sometime in 1971, I believe it was fall of 71 we met in this underground auditorium or kind of lecture room that was one floor below ground in the Cerritos Cultural Center where the Stargate would be.
Now I did find in the early 1980s the floor burned off when the Sartiti family owned the Cerritos Cultural Center.
Today you can see that meeting chamber has almost sort of an amphitheater from the surface of the ground out as if you go over the wall of the Cerritos Cultural Center you can see sort of this amphitheater which is just the ruins of this underground amphitheater that Rumsfeld and he said to us that we had to keep the time travel devices we were being exposed to absolutely secret, his national security depended on it. He said the primary purpose of teleportation is military.
It's going to allow us to put troops precisely where they're needed on the battlefield. So Rumsfeld was pretty much immersed in the goals of the defense department. So I think if you have if somebody has problems with war then he might be viewed as a villain, but if you embrace the doctrine of just war and there are times when we have to stand up to tyrants just to preserve our own lives.
Many religious faiths have actually stated is proper to wage a just war, for example, in self-defense or defense of others then maybe he's not a villain.
It just really comes down to how you view war, but he was definitely an aparatick of the U.S. defense department and I felt that he and many of the other men I was meeting on the project that like my father were individuals who had seen, had gone to hell and back during world war two and they were just trying to prevent all future wars because those from that generation felt if we did have a world war three, world war four would be fought with sticks and stones.

So they were really concerned about preserving peace and even engaging in limited war of a conventional nature to prevent an all-out nuclear war.
That was my impression and by the way Dr. Oppenheimer acted knew it was the federal science administrator of Project Pegasus who was essentially the quintessential Manhattan project physicist gave interviews even in the 1980s about the need to prevent nuclear war. So that culture was not a genocidal culture that wanted to use atomic bombs to blow everything up, but quite the contrary to prevent a mass disaster of that kind.
DR. SALLA: Well one of the things that you already mentioned was the 9-11 event and that you had gotten intelligence about that in 1971 with one of these excursions into the future maybe from 2045 in terms of what was what was brought back by you and your team or the others. Now you mentioned of course Rumsfeld's involvement of that in that so Rumsfeld knew had and you have that affidavit that you've put out with that Rumsfeld and others knew that 9-11 was going to happen
Now of course we know that one day before 9-11 Rumsfeld gave that extraordinary press conference where he revealed I think it was what was a 2.1 trillion dollars was missing from the Pentagon budget and he actually attacked the Pentagon bureaucracy as America's greatest enemy and that was very interesting that he was attacking the bureaucracy because they were blocking some of the innovations that Rumsfeld was wanting the Pentagon to adopt which included the creation of a space corps. So that was back on September 10, 2001 Rumsfeld because the Pentagon was blocking a lot of advanced projects including the creation of a space corps he gives this press conference and then of course the next day everything gets buried because of 9-11.
So yes can you kind of elaborate about that sequence of events and Rumsfeld's involvement in 9-11 or advanced knowledge of it exposing the Pentagon missing money?
ANDREW: Well I know this. I know that I was in New Mexico in 1971 when my dad received a phone call at the restaurant known as the La Hacienda his old friend Maria Chavez or Connie Chavez also known as Hilly Chavez, that was her nickname Hilly gave him a phone just a standard restaurant regular phone and he said “Let's go son “ and then my dad sped down from Old Town Albuquerque to Saccora, New Mexico and we went into a C-shape Aerojet corporation facility that was then on the northern side of the grounds or the New Mexico Institute of Science and Technology also known as New Mexico Tech. They are on the corner of Volok and Lloro place there was a Masonic lodge, but then there was the research library of New Mexico Tech and there was this small V-shaped building with a zero escape been about a parking lot that accommodated about 20 vehicles. My dad parked the car got down there very fast. He must have been speeding at about 90 miles per hour because it took about an hour to get the 90 miles from Albuquerque to Saccora and we go through the middle of the building and he flashes his badge for the guard in the center of the building and says my son's going with me and we walk through, these bars open up on the left side and allow us into the left side of the building and this young postdoc working for Dr. Sterling Colgate who was variously president and the dean of physics at New Mexico Tech comes into the hallway and says Ray you're not going to believe it we've we finally got it.

We've got images of the event that's going to be known as 9-11. So we go further into the left side of the Aerojet corporation facility there where those graduate students in physics looking for Dr. Sterling Colgate not being interested to search out those names were essentially analyzing images from the future like the one that I was taking back by summer of 72 from 2045, but here in 1971 they already had footage from some source, it might have been technological imaging from our present into the future.

Inside this room they had about 20 television sets or VDTs as they went on video display terminals and the young postdoc or graduate student working for Sterling Colgate kept on showing one of the planes hitting one of the towers and then he would reverse it and let it happen again and go bam and my dad was just stupefied.

And then when we saw enough of that he just said “Well thank you very much gentlemen” and we drove back to Albuquerque.

So during other experiences then and later I heard my dad talking about 9-11 and so I don't have direct evidence that Donald Rumsfeld was briefed on 9-11, but as I stated in my affidavit before the Vancouver 9-11 tribunal in on 9-11 2012 it really goes beyond the possible to assume that the defense attaché for Project Pegasus did not know about the ultimate event to be known as 9-11 if my father knew if I and my father saw images of it which was really the south power strike and if it was spoken out of open we had a program it had to be something that had been shared with Mr. Rumsfeld at least in the early 70s before 9-11.

So I've taken the position out well there's a couple ways of interpreting this one is that he literally knew on the day of the attacks that this was expected on from September 11th another possibility is that he knew to resign at the uncertainty that it was going to be happened that would explain why for example the FBI agent John O'Neill took up residence in the Twin Towers another possibility is it was something shared with him in the 70s and it was not within his contemplation that morning and when it happened he then went out and helped people escape the pentagon.
I don't know I don't know that Donald Rumsfeld was literally expecting that event on that day, but I think that that's a possibility that should be explored. Well I think certainly that the project knew about it.
DR. SALLA: Well that circumstantial evidence of that foreknowledge was the press conference he gave on September 10 where he revealed those incredible details about just how much money was missing from the Pentagon and that the greatest enemy that the American people face is the pentagon bureaucracy.
Why would a Secretary of Defense say that America's greatest enemy is the Pentagon bureaucracy was he really alluding to the secret government and I guess and I just want to throw something out and get you to respond to that,, was he in that speech referring to the pentagon bureaucracy as America's greatest enemy, was he signaling his frustration over the fact that he wasn't able to stop what the people in the covert programs knew was going to happen on September 11. There were others that knew that there was going to be this kind of like attack and that it had inside support and so he was frustrated that he couldn't stop it and so maybe that's why he gave his press conference. So yes that's my speculation. I just want to get you to respond.
ANDREW: That would be my assessment as a graduate in American history who would go on to be admitted at the federal level in this country then run for president.

That would be my assessment that in what you're suggesting is that Rumsfeld's speech on September 10th of 2001 was essentially sort of a second stroke of Eisenhower's farewell address where he discussed the threat posed by the military industrial complex.
I think that that's a fair assessment and because he was an ethical man who was even stating that he loved his life and therefore would never engage in an extra-marital fair and betray her.
He was always nice to me. I knew him as a friendly nice American not as some villain or ogre and he also was working on survival and peace in a nuclear age, so I think he was concerned that things had transmogrified into something even more serious after Eisenhower's farewell address of 1961.
DR. SALLA: Well I agree I think that Eisenhower's farewell address of 1961 and Rumsfeld's speech on September 10th 2001 which few people know about or even acknowledge that they are very similar in identifying that the greatest who the greatest enemy of the American people is concerned and they're one thing that I found during my research for one of my books that is a space force our Star Trek future that came out in 2021 was that Donald Rumsfeld was the guy that chaired the space commission in 2000 that had been convened by Congress to make recommendations in terms of space and the future and he recommended it.
He was strongly in favor of creating a space corps which today is known as space force because that was set up in 2019, but it wasn't it wasn't Donald Trump who actually was the one that first proposed the creation of a space force it was actually this space commission that Donald Rumsfeld would chair back in the year 2000 and his proposal for a space corps was actually blocked by the Pentagon bureaucracy which is why I think he was so angry and why he came out with that speech attacking the Pentagon bureaucracy and the end result was that rather than creating a space corps that would deal with future threats faced by the U.S. that that was put on the eyes for 19 years until Donald Trump came on the scene.
And it was because there were people that didn't want America to develop a space corps and I think the reason Rumsfeld wanted to do it was that he wanted to white world the black programs in terms of secret space programs that because he worked with different servicemen in those and people like you in the covert programs that he wanted such people to get recognition and the creation of a space corps in 2001 would have been a way to kind of bring that those covert space programs or chrononote programs like in your case into the public arena and people to be given recognition.

ANDREW: Right now we're going to be cheated because he had quantum access information about the fact that I was going to be cheated of all of my pay for both project pay-to-system project Mars all of my benefits and he had seen something I would write in the future where I complained about him having six houses or something he said to me. Andy I want you to know I've worked for everything I have every cent of it he was kind of angry that was like when I went back to New Mexico in the first summer of 71 and so I think that Napa Pro sort of the view of Rumsfeld you're presenting my dad was a Republican from a small town in Pennsylvania so he was fairly conservative not I wouldn't say reactionary, but conservative and yet he supported and voted for presence John F Kennedy and Harry S Truman because he always voted for the man read that for the party and he believed that Donald Rumsfeld would have made a fine president and that kind of corresponded to the to the positive impression that Mr. Rumsfeld made on me because a child so I think these kinds of actions that he took were consistent and another thing I might add is that in contemporary America because of the post-Vietnam syndrome if you will everybody is always referring to different intelligence agencies and military departments and even corporations and churches and other organizations in a monolithic way, but people forget that within every human heart every family every town every organization there are good and bad people with and good bad impulses and in that sense the battle between good neighbors going on all the time at the level of our own parts and so people will people will pretty suppose that everybody working for the CIA or everybody working for the Department of Defense is a war marker or an aparatick of the Deep State and that is just not true.
That's one of the reasons I've spoken out when I came forward publicly in 2004. I was advised by Virginia Old, somebody I hadn't met in 30 years who was a CIA agent on Project Pegasus that that because I was not giving my lectures with that sort of characteristic post-Vietnam cynicism about the CIA the DIA DARPA and the rest that I was gaining a lot of support within the intelligence committee, but she also warned me that not everybody in the U.S. intelligence community supported me coming forward and literally told me what where I was then living was safe from an assassination risk.

So I've tried to contextualize the fact that within the U.S. intelligence 20 defense department there are people who've been favoring disclosure and those who've been willing to assassinate people to prevent disclosure it's been a war all along and I think that you've done a fine job today for textualizing the actual career of double Henry Rentsville in that regard and what he ultimately tried to create that indicated he was a moral man trying to improve the situation in the different agencies and departments that he worked for.

DR. SALLA: Well I remember in my interview with Randy Kramer very interesting person in terms of his memories of being a part of these secret space programs. He said something and there was another witness of a secret space program that is Michael Gerloff who also was someone that served in a kind of like the space marines, but the thing that kind of stuck in my memory was that Randy Kramer said that when he finished his 20 year and back in 2005 that he was on a lunar operations command. He was the first person to actually identify lunar operations command as the chief base used for kind of recruitment and maintenance of secret space program operatives.
He said that he went to a farewell ceremony and he said there was there were kind of like a lot of senior a brass there and some VIPs there for this kind of like for the retirement of a bunch of people that had finished their 20 years in the in the 20 and back program and he said that Donald Rumsfeld who had just retired as Secretary of Defense was there as the guest of honor as the VIP and he gave a speech where he said that he would do all he could to ensure that people had served in the 20 and back would be protected in terms of their benefits and recognition and so forth.
So that I remember that that Rumsfeld kind of like gave that speech and that it greatly impressed these people that had finished their 20 and backs because that's the other thing I've learned in addition to you and Randy Kramer, Michael Ralph, Corey Goode and others have all said the same thing that after doing the 20 and back then they they're sent back and they get virtually no benefits, no assistance even though they've served for 20 years and are entitled to kind of like retirement benefits that any military personnel gets for serving 20 years, but they're given none of that.

And in fact like it's made hard harder for them because they suffer PTSD and so, but Rumsfeld was very much a kind like a good guy trying to help these guys that had served in the 20 and back programs and that's consistent with what I found in my research that he was behind this proposal to set up a space corps back in 2001.
ANDREW: Right I was I actually quantified what I was supposed to be paid and benefited with and it comes to about three million dollars. I was supposed to receive money placed in reserve thirty thousand dollars placed in reserve to my 25th birthday the value of that money today would be well over 250,000 when I was serving on Mars I was supposed to receive a zero interest loan to buy a home in Redding California, a salary and a cradle to the grave revolving door of government service.
So I am owed several million by the U.S. government and what I've learned from well Courtney Hunt the CIA said that I should continue paying my tax and so forth and await the day when we would be paid, but I'm 60 now and I haven't been paid for things I did for the government between age six and 11 and between age 19 and 22.
So in several years, it will be 40 years since I ended my government service, that'll be in 2024, it will be 40 years since I left Project Mars in 1984 and I have not been paid.
Now what apparently individuals of the status number of 50,000 Americans according to Courtney Hunt of CIA and what I found recently for a friend of mine who's both been on the inside looking out the outside looking in the U.S. intelligence community, that were known in the intelligence community as ghosts, that they intentionally shoved their fault deck and didn't pay or benefit us because they want to keep the project secret and I am happy and proud of the fact that by coming forward now almost 20 years ago I believe that I kicked off the literature of revelation that we've had of those ghosts who have been cheated in this way.

DR. SALLA: It's very important that people who have served in these covert programs are given recognition because yes it really does create a toll and I know your health is very questionable and you're suffering some acute problems now and some of that is related to things that you did during the covert programs so I just wanted…
ANDREW: Michael yes I was briefed by Chad Pera in 2003 that all of the children in Project Pegasus were in metabolic syndrome and that it mimicked diabetes and to not go on metformin or glucophage which now almost 20 years later, 19 years later, we know causes kidney failure which I'm in.
So yes I was damaged by Project Pegasus and Project Mars and not even paid. So in my worst days my fans say go ahead and help speak, cheer up because in a sense I view myself almost as a man without a country in the sense that I was used even to go back to the time of Washington, to advise General Washington to retreat his troops from New York Harbor and hence play a role in the creation of the United States, but then after serving in two classified projects for it was denied everything that my late father and I were promised. This is an injustice in the history of the American government that was one of the things that propelled me to run for president 2016 and needs to be righted and they have those records.
I know that. I know they have my records because I've even joked to people screening people at the airport for TSA and I've said “Well if you want to run my name you're going to find it all over in alphabet agencies and then they do that and they say “Okay sir, you can go.” and I know that you know. You mentioned that you found my name in the gifted and talented student documents that survive.
I have put forward so many proofs of my experiences in Project Pegasus that I should be able to win in a court of law in this country, but I have not yet got a fellow practitioner to file under 42 USC 1983 for me a so-called Givens action “deprivation of civil liberties by a government official operating under color of authority” and that's what all participants in these classified projects who have been denied and cheated of everything they were promised or their families were promised are owed by the U.S. government.

DR. SALLA: Just to go back to something you mentioned a little earlier, that is the intelligence gathering on future presidents. You mentioned Obama and Clinton as two presidents that were identified during your work with Project Pegasus. So how did that happen and was that all for Project Pegasus?

ANDREW: Well actually it was both projects the first presidents that I met decades before they became president where the Bushes Georgia H.W. Bush and the son George W. Bush again I was 10 or and a 24-year-old or so George W. Bush got right in my face at a reception in New Mexico for he and his father and said Andy have you heard my daddy now are going to be president.

So he was very I remember he was very florid his dad was very reserved and conservative, very appropriate as was Mrs. Bush then at a later that was sort of a reception at a restaurant.

And then at a smaller group there was Bill Clinton on my left and then Dr. Harold M. Agnew the director of Project Pegasus, my father, Dr. Ivan Browning the director of science and technology for the CIA from 1959 to 74 and then my dad's colleague at Ralph M. Parsons whose name was Joe Conneson said before the adults.

They are talking to the young Bill Clinton sitting on my left, “So Bill how are you doing with the information” and he said “Well fellas I know that you're brilliant, you're always building more destructive nuclear weapons for the atomic research community and I know what you're telling me, but gentlemen some days I get up and I have to pinch myself and saying me Bill Clinton President for the United States well fellas, that dog don't hunt.”

That's a direct quote. Now when I met the Bushes and I met Bill Clinton as a child I felt that they were good people again just like Mr. Rumsfeld just like Jimmy the mailman at Mars Point New Jersey and I got my cross pass with Mr. Clinton again when we were crossing the country to California in November 1972. He was coming back to Little Rock after the defeat of his candidate George McGovern in the 1972 presidential election and a friend of him was teasing him and saying so Billy boy what are you going to do now that your guy lost. What are you going to deal with yourself and go Clinton came up to the to this gentleman walking alongside of us at the downtown Little Rock Holiday Inn parking lot and oddly my dad had said Andy I left my camera in the car let's go out there and get it. And the result was we crossed paths with Bill Clinton and he and he said “Well actually I'm going to go back to law school and finish out, then I'm going to come back here and run for Congress and I want to ask you Bill what would the guy's name was your hit Harry. Do I have your vote and start shaking the guy's hand and laughing.

So we had that encounter with Bill Clinton in New Mexico right after he'd been briefed about his future presidency and then about a year later we had an episode where we walked past Bill Clinton and he made this reference to his future first during the politics by running for Congress in Arkansas because I don't know whether that was planned or just a coincidence, but it was the same individual and what was strange about that meeting or passing of Bill Clinton was I saw kind of these waves of energy coming off of him across the tarmac there after McCatham parking lot around the downtown Little Rock Holiday Inn and I don't know how that connected to his destiny, but I picked up a strong energetic pattern from Bill Clinton both times, both in New Mexico and then in Arkansas.

And again my dad didn't say look we've got to run to that young man who's going to be a president that we met back in back in New Mexico, but then when I asked him in the late 80s future presidents were he did mention Bill Clinton that young man who gave that long speech at the 1988 DNC and then George W. Bush the son of vice president Bush and then even an African-American or a black president and he couldn't remember Obama's name he said something like brick obonja.

That was in 1989 all the strange thing about that is I had been trained with Barack Obama in the summer 1980.

DR. SALLA: Well before we go there, before we go to that training with Barack Obama I just wanted to kind of like back up, something you said about George Bush senior and junior.

You thought that they were good people because I know there's going to be listeners who were going to really take umbridge at that and certainly George Bush senior I mean it's known that he was the guy that set up the Zapata oil company as a front for collecting a bunch of assassins that would assassinate Fidel Castro, but then after the Bay of Pigs that that that they were repurposed to assassinate an American VIP and of course there's that infamous document that that shows that CIA document or was it an FBI document that shows that George Bush senior was actually present in Dallas during the Kennedy assassination and many people say that he was actually running the Zapata hit team that had now been repurposed to kill Kennedy so yes so he seemed to been truly a creature of the Deep State.

ANDREW: Well my take on that Michael is I'm aware of all those assertions, all I'm saying is I was a kid on the project and I'm not committing what historiography is known as a presentist evaluation of the past.

All I'm saying is that as a kid on the project he was not a creepy adult, in fact, there was occasionally off-color humor even his own young son was engaging in some and he said that “W I don't want to hear that don't go there you've got kids present” so when I hear stories like the first shipment Burgess W. Bush was a pedophile and so forth I discount it because he was actually policing people on the project to be appropriate around the children on the project and I was a child when I met the Bushes.

I never met them when I was older. If in fact he was complicit in the assassination of president Kennedy then my conclusion would be shared with others that he's a villain, an evil man, but I don't have that evidence. I just have the evidence of what I felt and witnessed when I met him and that's something that I'm trying to urge people to do.

We only know what we experience and then we only had enough experience trump's knowledge and knowledge trump's information and information trump's data and a lot of what's been happening is that data has been accelerated from knowledge into almost what people regard as experience and that's just not valid.

So, for example, I hear things asserted about people. There were all kinds of false claims asserted about me when I came forward and then my run for president.

And I know that there's just a pattern that's going on in this country. It could be from a foreign power, where very good people are being vilified and I think we have to keep an eye on that, but all I'm saying is that the Bushes I met were nice people, the ones following that was a nice person. I’m just bearing witness to my experience.

DR. SALLA: Well and I do want to kind of like say that there's a book written by Ronald Kessler who looked at who interviewed secret service agents for a number of U.S. presidents and these secret service agents pointed out that George Bush and Barbara Bush were really nice people, that they treated especially Barbara Bush that they treated the secret service agents with great respect and dignity and would kind of like look out for them and I think that was the same with George W. Bush and Laura Bush and interestingly Ronald Kessler in his book said that Jimmy Carter and Al Gore were complete assholes in terms of how they treated secret service agents.

So it kind of shows that yes because the thing is in terms of UFO research we look at people like Jimmy Carter and Al Gore as being kind of like good guys because they were kind of like trying to bring out disclosure or they were associated with positive policies, but at a personal level they were complete assholes.

And similarly I think it's quite possible that that works the other way around too that people like George Herbert Walker Bush did set up the Zapata company that was used for the Kennedy assassination, but he was doing a job for the CIA covert operations and these people regard themselves as patriots and from their perspective even though I strongly disagree with it from their perspective Kennedy was a bad guy that needed to be eliminated and so they considered themselves to be kind of patriots.

ANDREW: Well maybe after they found his presidential daily brief in the in the Kremlin they concluded that he had actually betrayed the country. I'm not going to justify the Kennedy assassination, but I would look at it this way Michael I've been a lifelong Democrat at first work for Hubert H. Humphrey at Minnesota for president 1968 when I was seven years old.

I went door to door in Morris plains New Jersey calling for his election asking people to support him and I've been a Democrat my whole life. I'm now 60, but what I've experienced is I've indicated books you've just observed about the Bush's and then the actual treatment by Mr. Gore and Mr. Carter of their secret service protectors is that Democrats tend to lionize people or their woksonian idealism. Democrats are sitting with Republicans often are doing right by people.

Scripture teaches that “By their acts you know them,” and when I look back at my 60 years most of the time I've been helped in a material way it's been by Republicans. Most of the time I've been agreed with about my ideal it's been Democrat and what I was trying to do in my hundred proposals when I ran for president 2016 is bring together those two styles of American politics where we are not only concerned about maintaining the high ideals of Democrats, but doing right by other people in everyday life like some of the Republicans have constantly shown me, because I think that scriptures is right.
It's true by their acts show you know them and I've known very principled Republicans despite my membership in the Democratic Party and then when I come into rough periods in my life where I really need help as I did when I lost my vision.
Who helped me? One of my brothers a lifelong Republican. When I got the opportunity to make substantial money as a lawyer, who was I working for, Republicans who were trying to spread the wealth.
So I think we have to kind of bring together Wilsonian idealism and a Reaganism to actually heal the country, but I do think that in addition to that there's a couple of other things going on.
One is that there's a paranoid style of American politics in which simply untrue claims are being made about good people who are serving our country. Another pattern I think, but I can't prove it is that there is foreign intelligence working to attack what I call the original CIA that is charismatic individual American and that could be a KGB Russian program or other sort of conspiracy by those who want to damage the country and that's why I'm urging everybody to sit back and say wait a minute, do you know this about this person or is this just an assertion being made about this person on the internet that doesn't even meet the tests of modern university history and often it doesn't. It is what the law calls mere assertion.
DR. SALLA: Well I want to move on to something else concerning time travel and Al Bielek he gave a number of interviews talking about the origins of time travel which kind of differs to the origins that you have described so I just wanted to get your response Al Bielek said that U.S. time travel really took off in 1936 when there was an incident involving the USS Kearsarge which was doing some deep drilling or doing some deep sea operations in the Bermuda Triangle area and it interacted with an Atlantean crystal that took it into the future and that the Kearsarge came went into the future the whole ship went there disappeared went into the future got some information from the future U.S. Navy which presumably was the 1970s or 80s and then went back with information about time travel and that's when the U.S. Navy's time travel projects began and that eventually it perfected time travel where the Navy could move ships back and forward in time and that was used to win the second world war that the U.S. Navy in the second world war was being helped by the U.S. Navy from the 1970s and 80s with advanced weapons some nuclear technology to win the second world war. So yes I just wanted to get your feedback on that.

ANDREW: I interviewed at Bielek in 2005 so I then I had been actively investigating my own memories for five years and had 16 years of passes my father had been told the story of Project Pegasus which went all the way back to 1989 when I interviewed Bielek in 2005 he called me on the phone and I had a couple chats with him and I found out the following one is that he had gone back to one of his previous employers and not known that he had worked there which meant he was not in complete understanding of his own memories another thing I found is he only remembered his memories when he saw the Philadelphia Experiment, the movie of Philadelphia's firm the movie in 1984.
I also found that when I distinguished the two interviews I did with Dr. Robert W. Beckwith as well as the one-off interviews done by Alexandra Bruce and R. Kent Thomas of Dr. Beckwith that Dr. Beckwith's discussion of the actual Philadelphia experiment involving the USS Martha's Vineyard in August 1943 in Long Island Sound differed from the story we were told in books and TV shows and movies about the so-called Philadelphia experiment involving the USS Eldridge in Philadelphia Naval Shipyard and that is the version that before telling the story of the Kearsarge Al Bielek told.
He even claimed even confused teleportation and reincarnation when he stated that he jumped off the Eldridge and moved from being one of the Cameron brothers to his current identity as Al Bielek.
So I'm sorry to say this to the late Al Bielek's friends and admirers or those who have followed his work, but I believe he was a delusional individual. Now he may have worked for Project Pegasus or some other classified project involving quantum access and then had his memories scrambled, but I think the evidence about Al Bielek shows that that did, in fact, happen to him at some time in his life.

I did not encounter him when I was on Project Pegasus. I encountered Dr. Beckwith. Dr. Beckwith granted those four interviews two to me and then the one with the Chief of Bruce and Ben Thomas and the Philadelphia experiment cover story is the one that Al Bielek told and then used it to congratulate teleportation and reincarnation which are not connected except they resemble each other when you go through the tunnel and go back to heaven, that's kind of like the vortal tunnel that we experienced teleported.
He stated that people were getting to Mars via the Montauk chair and I knew through my own experiences the Montauk chair that all the Montauk chair does as a reverse engineer pilot seat from a downed UFO is send you to subjective moments in your own future. So if you go to Mars like I did by an aeronautical repositioning chamber if those experiences were accepted in the past by a Montauk chair then you could use the Montauk chair to pre-experience those events the red planet, but Al confused the Montauk chair which literally the device that was getting people to Mars.
So the bottom line is that Al Bielek's claims were not accurate. They showed evidence of somebody who did not do what he said and he just kept on interpolating and spinning every new piece of material in the paranormal to kind of stay on top of his career as a lecturer.
He was pretty much a disturbed individual
See one time he was asked at a conference oh you're saying that all these people making time travel claims can be mental patients and mind controlled. Does that does that include you too Al? And he turned about 180 degrees around and shook his head and said yes it does kind of smile.
So Al was not well and I'm sorry to say that his impact on the truth about time travel has been a negative force that I've been trained to clean up now for almost 20 years. He was essentially a disturbed person who was not sharing authoritative information about the Philadelphia experiment which actually did happen, but didn't involve radar invisibility of the Eldridge, but involved Tesla teleportation of the Martha's Vineyard and as you just described he then piled on that story for 1930s there I just he was just not a barricaded they have been working on Tesla's stuff from the time of his death on January 7th of 1943 forward and that led to the first attempt to teleport one of our ships.

DR. SALLA: Well let's now well let's kind of look at this in in terms of corroborating evidence Al Bielek certainly has created a lot of waves in his testimony, but there have been other people who have come forward to confirm that indeed there were time travel experiments conducted out of Montauk.

I certainly have interviewed a few people, Stewart Swerdlow for one, Preston Nichols I've spoken to him. He also confirmed that there was this going on. I never spoke to Duncan Cameron, but others have spoken to him and there have been other people who have confirmed Al Bielek's testimony that there were time travel experiments being run out of the Montauk project up there in Long Island and that the Montauk chair was used to open up a space-time portal using psychics. So there have been multiple witnesses coming forward to confirm this thing.

ANDREW: Well let me just say I encountered it earlier. I encountered it in 1970 before Project Montauk was launched. I've stated many times what I believe is the truth which is that it would make sense to spin, have a spin-off of the Montauk chair into a project Montauk or Project Looking Glass that were with the chronovisor, but a project Montauk with just the chair because among the benefits were your body didn't go anywhere and I know that we were getting very accurate information about the future via the Montauk chair.

I just met one else, but it into a way to get from Mars I would be sent to Mars were not using the Montauk chair I don't doubt what Preston and Duncan and others have said about project Montauk in fact I've reified the likelihood that they did have a spin-off of Project Pegasus consistent project Montauk in fact it may call it would also make sense, but Jack Pruitt Carl Jack Pruitt U.S. Navy born 1934 going new on the project and I met as recently as 2003 will have been promoted from a team leader on Project Pegasus into the research director of project Montauk that would have been entirely consistent with the developmental timeline of these technologies. I was just discounting the accuracy that will be from Al Bielek. I don't believe he should be looked upon as an authoritative source in this area.

DR. SALLA: Okay well there's some merit to that because Al Bielek and many others were acknowledging that they had their minds wiped and that there was some mind control used on them to kind of like make it difficult for them to recall what had happened. So there's a possibility of some kind of contamination or some embellishment, but at the same time.
ANDREW: The fact is I was tortured to forget what I experienced. We were constantly receiving the soviet leada machine every time we come back from Mars, so when Al was quite a kind individual to contact me in 2005 I've very begun left-ranked I have certainly grateful for him keeping alive public interest in the subject of time travel and reaching out to other chrononauts that I would not disparage his memory or doing I just meant that the net effect whatever it was whether it was delusion or mind-wiping or whatever it was well that he was just sort of conflating everything being alleged and trying to relate it and we can't do that in history.
DR. SALLA: Okay well let's kind of look at this in terms of his comments regarding the USS Kearsarge being involved in some kind of time travel experience back in 1936 and navy ships from the future being taken back and forward in time to help the U.S. Navy during the Second World War.
Now that was his claim right and so the thing is okay now is that delusion was that based in fact well I remember when I put out a segment talking about Bielek's claims regarding the Kearsarge I got an email and I think he'd be fine with me sharing this from John Warner the fourth the son of Senator John Warner and he said he said that he attended a showing of the final con final of the movie the Hollywood movie the Final Countdown which was a blockbuster. I think it was Kirk Douglas and other A-list actors were in that and that top navy brass were present and that they nodded their agreement with this with the films premise that navy ships were being sent back and forward in time to do various things just as Bielek had claimed regarding the Kearsarge incident.
Now that's not to confirm that Bielek is exactly correct, but I'm saying that it's acknowledging that that Bielek’s claim that ships such as the Kearsarge or other navy ships have been sent back and forward in time by the U.S. Navy to whether it's to change the timeline or nudge it in a certain way and that John Warner was kind of like sending me that nice piece of intel confirming that yes this is that this is going on and that the navy does acknowledge that this kind of movement of navy ships is occurring.

ANDREW: Right and when I interviewed Robert Beckwith in that time period this again was around 2005 2006 I think he would die in 2009 at age 89 we discussed that.

So now when I'm trying to go to addressing is the developmental timeline because look when they tried to teleport the Martha's Vineyard on August 12th 1983 they had that huge electrostatic discharge that caused that one sailor when the ship was brought back not from Norfolk Virginia, but Newport News Virginia and was then again in Long Island Sound.

There was one sailor paled through the midsection by a column of the splash caling of the vessel so that was the first attempt to apply Tesla teleportation to our naval ships to avoid Nazi mines that the Nazi navy had chained to the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean so that was August of 1943 there may have been something tried earlier involving the Kearsarge I just never heard that and Dr. Beckwith never discussed that earlier attempt to implement Tesla teleportation during what seven years before Tesla's death in 1936.

So I think that might have been Al just trying to embellish what had already been told because we do have a fairly stable data point in historiographic terms involving what I remember people talking about on Project Pegasus when I was a child and then what Dr. Beckwith confirmed when I was already over 40 years old and what he told Alexander Bruce and Ken Tarman so I think that the basic point made by John Warner the fourth about the fact that our the U.S. Navy and the U.S. Air Force are teleporting ships and planes passed in reveal it's what Dr. Beckwith shared with me and I released in around well I guess it was around 2006 maybe 2009 after his death.

So that's true. I'm not sure it really matters because there could have been a previous attempt when Tesla was still alive that has not really been supported very much by other principal in this area, but clearly it was something that was I mean August of 1943 was when the war was still on so we and we also know that if we're to believe what Dr.

Beckwith shared with me that I certainly published by 2009 then that means that by the present that that time 2005-2006 they had learned how to teleport a big heavy metal airplane or naval vessel and not have that a huge electrostatic discharge.
So that would that problem would have had them unsolved to do with Beckwith was claiming was operational by 2005 and P.E. actually told me that the jets that bomb Kosovo for president Clinton took off at Edwards Air Force Base in California it went up turn their teleporters on, teleported to Kosovo, turn their teleporters off, drop their bombs, turned around, turned their teleporters back on, and had lunch that day at the homes near Edwards Air Force Base.
He also stated that he was aboard a ship the U.S. Naval vessel anchored in Tampa, Florida and the captain showed him the implement on the hull of the vessel to flip, relocate the live ship miles on the surface of the ocean.
So that was claimed by 2005 that they had essentially with all how to teleport a heavy large metallic object like a ship or a plane and not have that huge disaster so that it just discharged that led to that catastrophe during the original Philadelphia Experiment and that we had to watch when we were just little kids from a point across the country.
You may remember the story of I've been sharing that one time one of the other boys in the program with me, David, left a coin in his pocket and by the time it gotten to New Mexico it had gotten so hot and was vibrating so much that it shot out of his pocket and burned his cuff and I was later told by my father that if that had stayed that it would have killed him.
So electrostatic discharge was going on in the program. I mean when I first teleported with my dad our mutual hair was floating all over the place from it I just tend to death the story about the Kearsarge because that's not that that challenge is the historicity of what we remember about the actual Philadelphia Experiment in Long Island found involving the…
DR. SALLA: Okay, well definitely it's an issue that needs to be investigated more the Montauk guys they have their history that has come forward and certainly we need more information to confirm which of these accounts is more accurate, but what I wanted to do to just kind of wrap it up is that so you finished your involvement in the Pegasus project in 1972 and then in 1979 you, I think that you began to get involved in this Mars jumproom.

So we can talk about that next interview, we can do a repeat or a third interview, but what happened in between from 1972 to 79 you're what 11 years old. Do you go through finish high school start college, I mean, is that what happened?

MILAB CHILD PTSD TORTURE

ANDREW: Yes, what happened was when I left Project Pegasus at the end of the summer 72 they took me to a military office in New Jersey and they put these large needles all the way up my spine from my coccyx all the way up to the back of my neck and they infused my spine in my head with this unspeakably severe headache saying this is how I would feel whenever I thought about my experiences on Project Pegasus.
I thought what they were doing. I was trying myself no matter how painful this gets as they had me recount everything that happened over the last four years and by the way that was in real time that was 1968 to 72, but in time travel that was 1968 all the back to 100 million BC and then also we had come forward from 1971 to 73 and now I was back in 1972 after having visited 2045.
So I would tell myself that they were especially torturing me to forget what I had done in the program. I will not forget.
I don't know whether my dad knew about those activities. He tended to believe that I was not trying to treat them as delusional when I had said that they were shocking us after we would come back to Curtis Wright via teleportation by putting a plastic tongue depressor in our mouth and giving us about 30 seconds of vigorous electrical shocking in this kind of halo they put around our temple.
He had been told they weren't doing that when fact they were doing that. So I've described how my dad never would have permitted that. He would have viewed that as abusive as well as what was done to me in that medical lab in terms of literally using the induction of pain or trauma based mind control if you would if you will to try to get me to forget what had happened to me over the interview for the past four or five years.
Now I know who that person was. I'm not free to state who that person was because I don't want to be sued, but that person has come forward to deny his involvement Project Mars and Project Pegasus. So one of the things he's concealing is that he was involved in trauma based mind control, but based on subjective to that then we moved to well then I met my fiancée Gwen Coleman in Santa Fe in summer of 72 and all four of my surviving older siblings would be available to testify that nope Andy never was in New Mexico until fall of 72.

Well how did Logan cross paths with my father and I in Santa Fe in summer 72. We even have the name of her brothers then girlfriend that she was with when I asked her as we were crossing them in Santa Fe why do they call it a halter and she turned and said to me "That's for me to know what can for you to find out," and my dad kind of chuckled so she remembers that brief encounter in Santa Fe
Then in 72 I crossed the country by a car with my six older family members my parents and my four older siblings and I went to junior high school and college in Chatsworth California.
I did extremely well in high school, National Merit Scholar, most likely to succeed and most respected out of a thousand graduating seniors. I won a number of journalism prizes. I won the national council teachers of English achievement award in writing and so forth. I did my school paper and I went to UC San Diego for freshman year and my father said "Son you're going to have to transfer to UCLA" and I said "Why dad" and he said because we're going to be doing something up here.
Now the reason that that was necessary was that the jumproom to Mars was at 999 North Sepulveda right down to San Diego freeway the 405 from Westwood, California and the location of the UCLA campus and that's where I would be jumping to Mars, so I had to transfer to UCLA which I did and I entered in fall of 1980, but before then I had a three week three and a half week training course in going to Mars taught by major Ed Dames at college of the Siskiyous in Weed California with William Brett Stilling, Dr. Regina Dugan, William Cameron McCool, Bernie Mendez and a young man going to Oxford College from Indonesia named Barry Soetaro who would run for president after changing his name a few years later around 1983 to Barack Hussein Obama.
And that is a true story and we only shared it not because he was the sitting president, but because he was one of our fellow Mars astronauts and we thought well if we don't we'll be able to the president was one of our colleagues in the program if that's discovered by a brilliant researcher like yourself Michael then they'll hold that as a threat to the validity of what we've been stating so we definitely told the truth that Mr. Obama was one of our colleagues in Project Mars and he was.

DR. SALLA: Well that's a great way to end this interview because it sets up the next interview where we're going to look into the Mars jumproom and what happened in that so Andy is there anything you want to say to my audience it's been a month since you were last on ex-politics today in terms of what you're doing or what you're working on or if people wanted to contact you?

ANDREW: Well anybody can reach me by researching my phone number through the Washington State Bar Association.org website wsba.org if they want. I would urge anybody to place a call to me if they have an original question or to place that question with you.

I want everybody to know that my books are finished both my memoirs of Project Pegasus and Project Mars and I've also written a trilogy about my paranormal experiences since birth that have nothing to do with time travel or going to Mars as well as a book about my afterlife memories which I've had my whole life.

I basically have been an experiencer my entire life and so I'm basically going to share my belief that our spirit does not die even though our bodies do and that were all on the path to ascension and I think that's a very hopeful thing to reflect on.

I will share information I've shared since I was nine years old about 51 years about the specific people that I remember being. These include the name of a very unusual first name in America that hired me to serve as one of the first professors at Amherst College a small town week, but I never should have heard of what I was born of a Swedish person's life and I'll tell who that was and that was the only prominent person I was done how my soul in all my past life memories.

Then I came up with the name of a rare musical instrument used in India before the ragas just a simple merchant so what I'm saying is I present evidence in that book of things about times and places where one should have no access to and I also share this fact my chapter eight or so my memoir Project Pegasus was being regressed to one past life in Project Pegasus after the Department of Defense told us that we shouldn't worry about losing our lives time traveling for the U.S. government in Project Pegasus because if we did we would go back to heaven review our life and then be born again. That's the nature of reality.

So I share that in the Pegasus memoir and then I use that and contextualize that at the beginning of my not my memories, but my exposure to past life regression in my afterlife book so that's one of the reasons I'm speaking out.
It's my belief that the United States was supposed to be the fulfillment of the enlightenment and it's my understanding based on what I was told and what I was involved in from Project Pegasus that the U.S. government has concealed things like the currentcy of the human soul, survival after death and the resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth after proving them through extrinsic scientific and technical processes that I and my father were involved in.
So that's why I kind of decided to finish out this six critical works with something about my afterlife memories and that's all been done and I don't doubt any of the conspiracy theories we discussed today including those involved in the Kennedy assassinations.
I want everybody to know that I've been researching such issues since I was a teenager and writing about them.
Well I know it's well you know Lewis Purdue of the Washington Post when I was in college about serving in Project Pegasus 10 years earlier that that interview has to be found people have mentioned to me they remember reading a post, but I want to find it a Washington Post that hasn't been achieved yet well this does be appearance of the Josephine Cobb image in a news magazine the early 70s going back to the early 50s has not yet been achieved without it in the National Geographic Circle like 1963, but not the early 70s.
DR. SALLA: Well we definitely will have an opportunity to touch on the Kennedy assassination again and the spirit and the afterlife and the resurrection of Jesus and the crucifixion and the cover-up of that incident in terms of information so these things that we will cover in future interviews so I just want to encourage listeners if you do have a question for Andy you could always just email me and I can ask it during one of these follow-up interviews.

Next interview we're going to be talking about the Mars jumproom so specifically if you have any questions about what Andy has said in the past regarding the Mars jumproom then definitely send that to me at drsalla@exopolitics.org. So Andy I want to thank you again for a really informative and rich interview. And all the best,
ANDREW: Thank you Michael and as always we shall know the truth and it's not that it's free.
